Stirling Castle. Since the commencement of its building by James V. the vicissitudes of Stirling Castle have been marked by continued strife and bloodshed. Throughout the wars of the English and Scotch the castle has ever been an object of contention. It now stands, an emblem of the unity of the two nations preserved by mutual agreement under the conditions of the "Act of Union."

Hello Edna!

Isn't it warm today? I am almost burned up. Why don't you come to see me.

Come soon.

Lovingly.
